

HALEMA JAMIESON

Halema Jamieson (MSc hons) has been involved with GBI and its ecology since 1999 when she first came over to work with the islands unique and threatened chevron skink. From 2003 – 2010 Halema worked for DOC on GBI managing threatened species programmes and supporting local private conservation initiatives before joining her husband to open a café and expand their local native nursery business specializing in restoration plantings and predator control. Her experience comprises over 20 years working in conservation in New Zealand, mostly on offshore islands. As a GBI resident and conservationist, Halema has supported the GBIET since its inception and has been a trustee since early 2013. Halema currently works as an ecologist for the Taranaki Regional Council but her home and family are still on GBI and she remains a trustee of the GBIET.
